

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for generating a configuration record for a network device is described. One implementation involves receiving general configuration information and vendor-specific configuration information about a network device. This 5 general and vendor-specific configuration information can be used to generate a configuration record unique to the network device.